Music Notes for March 14.

Statue of Bach outside Thomaskirche, Leipzig. Felix Mendelssohn raised the funds for the statue while he was director of the Leipzig Conservatory.

Sunday 21 March marks the 336th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750). All of the music for Sunday's service was composed and arranged by the man often referred to by musicians as der Meister alle Meister (the Master of Masters). Bach spent the last half of his life as the Cantor for the Thomaskirche in Leipzig, Germany. In addition to directing the music program for the 'St. Thomas Church,' Bach also provided music for three other churches in Leipzig. And if that wasn't enough, he was also the town composer, responsible for providing music for various local celebrations! The two hymns for the fifth Sunday of Lent, Blessed Jesus (Liebster Jesu) and Out of the Depths (Aus tiefer Not), were both harmonized by Bach. Choral singers often enjoy Bach's harmonization, as each part's interesting line can weave

The prelude, special music and another all of one work, simply titled Pièce d'Orgue (Organ Piece). What an understated title for a composition by the man known during his lifetime as one of the greatest organists of all time! (Bach was not known as a composer until years after his death, when composers like Felix Mendelssohn and Robert Schumann championed his music.) Bach used a French title to illuminate the French aspect of this three-part composition. The first section (this week's prelude) is marked Très vite (Very fast), with fleet passagework in the manuals. The second section (special music), Grave, exemplifies what the organ does so well, playing chord after chord on an infinite supply of air. The final section (postlude) is marked Lentement (slowly). However, Bach is referring to the harmony changing slowly, while the notes are as fleet as in the opening section.
